COVID-19 ISOLATION REQUIREMENTS

If you have symptoms or have tested positive for COVID-19

Assume that you may have the virus and may be contagious. Symptoms include:

- fever or chills
- cough
- shortness of breath
- decreased or loss of taste or smell
- two or more of:
 - runny nose or nasal congestion
 - headache
 - extreme fatigue
 - sore throat
 - muscle aches or joint pain
 - gastrointestinal symptoms (such as vomiting or diarrhea)

If you have these symptoms, you should isolate:

- for at least five days if you are:
 - fully vaccinated
 - under 12 years of age
- for at least 10 days if you are:
 - over the age of 12 and not fully vaccinated
 - immunocompromised
 - live in a highest risk setting

Your isolation period begins the day after you noticed your symptoms or the day after you received a positive test result – whichever came first. The day you first noticed symptoms or took the test is considered day zero.

If you reach the end of your isolation period and have a fever or other symptoms, you must continue to isolate until your symptoms have improved for at least 24 hours (or 48 hours if the symptoms affect the digestive system) and you have no fever.

After you finish isolating

For five days (or 10 days if you are immunocompromised) after your isolation period ends, you should wear a well-fitted mask in all public settings.

You can temporarily remove your mask for essential activities (such as when eating in shared space at school/work while still maintaining as much distancing from others as possible). You can participate in activities where masking can be maintained throughout, but you should avoid activities where mask removal would be necessary (such as dining out).

Once your isolation period is complete you should:

- avoid visiting anyone who is immunocompromised or at higher risk of illness (for example, seniors)
- not visit or go to work in any highest risk settings

If you live with someone who has symptoms or has tested positive for COVID-19

You do not need to isolate if one of the following applies to you:

- you have previously tested positive in the last 90 days and do not have symptoms
- you are over 18 years old and have received a COVID-19 booster dose and do not have symptoms
- you are under 18 years old and are fully vaccinated and do not have symptoms

Instead for 10 days after exposure:

- self-monitor for symptoms
- wear a mask and avoid activities where mask removal would be necessary
- do not visit anyone who is at higher risk of illness, such as seniors, or any highest risk settings (unless you previously tested positive in past 90 days)

If you do not meet any of the criteria above, you must isolate while the person with symptoms/positive test result isolates (or for 10 days if you are immunocompromised).

If you've been exposed to someone from another household with symptoms of COVID-19 or a positive test result

You are required to:

- self-monitor for symptoms for 10 days after your last exposure
- wear a mask, avoid activities where mask removal is necessary (such as dining out, high contact sports) and follow all other public health measures if leaving home
- do not visit any highest-risk settings (such as long-term care or retirement homes) or people who may be at higher risk of illness (such as seniors) for 10 days after your last exposure

Taxing churches: Religious institutions in Iqaluit no longer exempt from property tax

By Jeff Semple Global News
Posted July 26, 2022 7:00 am
Updated July 27, 2022 12:21 am

Following the discovery of unmarked graves at former residential school sites and ahead of Pope Francis' visit to Nunavut's capital on Friday, the City of Iqaluit has passed a bylaw that could require churches to begin paying property taxes.

Religious institutions in Canada are generally exempt from paying taxes. Iqaluit's new bylaw, first proposed by the mayor last year, requires churches and other community groups to apply for tax relief. Applicants must meet a series of strict conditions and the total annual funding available for all groups is capped at $300,000.

City council approved the third and final reading of the bylaw on April 12, which means local churches risk receiving only partial tax relief, or none at all, beginning in 2023.

"It is unfair. It is a kind of revenge, a kind of game," said Father Daniel Perreault, pastor at Our Lady of the Assumption, Iqaluit's only Catholic Church.

Father Daniel Perreault is the pastor at Our Lady of the Assumption, Iqaluit's only Catholic Church. Jeff Semple / Global News

Perreault said the bylaw may limit the church's ability to offer free services — from weddings and funerals to hospital and prison visits.

"It will not kill us. It's just one more thing to make us suffer a little bit more," he told Global News. "For some churches, they can even (become) bankrupt by that tax."

Last year, 16 local organizations were exempt from paying property taxes under the city's previous rules, including eight religious institutions.

In a statement, a spokesperson for the City of Iqaluit said the "intent of this bylaw is to provide a fair opportunity, to all community-based organizations, to apply for full or partial property tax relief."

"This is not a by-law specific to the church," the spokesperson said.

Saint Jude's Anglican Cathedral in Iqaluit may be forced to begin paying property taxes next year, along with other religious institutions and community groups. Global News Nunavut MP Lori Idlout also defended the bylaw in an interview with Global News in Iqaluit, noting the remote northern city is already struggling to pay for basic services.

"Everyone is lacking in resources," she said. "It's not fair to the rest of the municipality to have to carry the burden of a faith-based group — that itself is part of the history of colonialism." The bylaw has proved polarising in the community, which is home to about 7,500 people. The per-capita impact of residential schools was higher in the North than anywhere else in Canada because of its large Indigenous population.

But despite their traumatic history with the church, around three quarters of Iqaluit's population still identifies as Christian, according to Statistics Canada.

Global News recently attended Sunday morning mass at Our Lady of the Assumption, where parishioners from a range of ethnic backgrounds recited scripture in English, French and Inuktitut. The pews were packed with several dozen people, who bowed their heads as Father Perreault prayed for those who "hate the church."

Asked about the significance of the Pope's upcoming visit, Father Perreault confessed he didn't know what to expect. "It will be a great day for all of us," he told Global News following the service. "But for many people it will be another occasion to hate us more. This is their decision: to love or to hate. It is a decision."

The Pope will spend just three hours in Iqaluit, where he'll attend a public event hosted by members of the Inuit community and a private meeting with some of Nunavut's residential school survivors.

Abraham Tagalik attended Sir Martin Frobisher Federal Day School as a child. The former radio host and co-founder of the Aboriginal Peoples Television Network told Global News he welcomed the Pope's visit and hoped for a heartfelt apology. "It's good that he's coming. It's almost surreal," Tagalik said.

While grilling freshly caught Arctic char on the banks of the Sylvia Grinnell River, he explained why he believes the discovery of unmarked grave sites has only accelerated the decline of the church's role in Nunavut.

"In the early days, our parents were very much going to church and following the teachings of the Bible," he said.

"The young people today, they don't go to church, they don't read the Bible, they're not really religious in any way anymore. I think it was kind of forced on us at that stage. It was all part of converting us," he said.

"They've lost the control they used to have."
