From Bobby Stone's family, we would like to say miigwech...

Thank you for all for the love during the passing of our beloved husband, dad, brother, papa.

Miigwech to the firekeepers, pastor Crystal, Rhonda and the gospel singers, the drum and ceremony family, the garage crew, the Joseph's, Sophie Solares, Ogimaa, Melanie and her team, Mackenzie and Blundy, and to all that offered their prayers and kind gestures through the week. Each of you helped us to send dad off in a Good Way, and that is something we will always cherish ...

1000 "miigwech"s...

Sincerely, Stephanie, Justyn, Duane, and Ashley

"Saving our Home and Native Land"

On August 4, 2014, 26 billion litres of waste water containing dangerous chemicals poured into local waterways and one of the world's deepest freshwater lakes. Quesnel Lake, in central British Columbia, birthing waters of salmon and an important tributary of the Fraser River watershed, was irreparably changed when the dam at the Mount Polley Mine broke in the middle of the night.

"For as long as I can remember, the waters of B.C.'s Quesnel Lake played an important role in my community," said Jacinda Mack, coordinator of First Nations Women Advocating Responsible Mining. "We fished for trout and swam in its depths, camped along its shores and picked berries and medicines in the surrounding Cariboo Mountains. The entire time, we were sharing our Xat'sull language and culture with our children." Jacinda's community has been devastated by the mine waste spill and the ongoing contamination of the water through mine activities. Despite calls from affected communities, church groups, and environmental organizations, there has been no accountability or justice for the people, for the animals, for all life living near Quesnel Lake.

Seven thousand kilometres away, Indigenous Lenca communities in Honduras are fighting to stop a mega-dam from being built on the sacred Gualcarque River. Berta Caceres was their leader when on March 2, 2016, she was shot and killed in her home for her outspoken voice of dissent. Berta worked tirelessly to protect a river and a way of life at risk. The Gualcarque River provides Berta's community with food and drinking water, and Berta's murder sent a clear message to anyone standing up to protect the earth that they were in danger.

The lone witness to her murder said, "Our dream is to build a different world, to generate life amid so much violence and death, but they do not even allow us to do that." Surely Berta, and her community, were walking in the most fearsome valleys in the days and months before her murder. As an outspoken and committed woman leader, she had been defamed, criticized, and threatened, yet her struggle for the earth and the sacred water continued; evil surrounded her, yet she walked proudly in the footsteps of her ancestors, listening and answering the call of Creator to protect life.

April 22 is Earth Day. It's a day to remember and care for the earth. It's also a day for action and justice. There's a common chorus in Latin American hymns, "God is not in heaven. God is in our brothers and sisters." We know this from 1 John 3:16–18: "We know love by this, that he laid down his life for us—and we ought to lay down our lives for one another. How does God's love abide in anyone who has the world's goods and sees a brother or sister in need and yet refuses help? Little children, let us love, not in word or speech, but in truth and action."

Berta laid down her life for her kin; her death is remembered as the day her seed was sown to be reborn in a million others who would live by her example. She wasn't only fighting for the river sacred to her people, but for all rivers and lakes. "Wake up humanity!" she said as she received the Goldman Environmental Prize the year before she was killed. "There is no time left."

Sister Streams was a movement created by the communities impacted by the Mount Polley Mine disaster to remember and honour our waters, to pray for justice and their safekeeping. August 4 is a day to remember that we have only one planet and we, as guardians of the earth, must protect it. As we struggle to respond to the call to be people of faith, caretakers of the earth and each other, let our discomfort challenge us to use our voice for the voiceless, the trees, the waters and the mountains, like Berta and Jacinda. This Earth Day, as we walk on new grass and the abundance of life and promise blooms all around us, let us work together to protect Mother Earth, our common home. Let us defend her and keep her, honouring the sacrifices that so many have made for us and doing our part to live the vision of Jesus for a world of peace with justice.

—United for Mining Justice (UfMJ) is a network of United Church of Canada folks and allies working towards a just extractive sector laws and practices, for an accountable Canadian mining industry, and for local and national jurisdiction over mineral resources. Our vision is a society where people's traditions, values and rights are respected.
